PUBLIC INTEREST & GOVERNMENT CAREER ADVISOR

Tony Waller serves as the Public Interest and Government Employment Specialist for the law school. Students interested in public service careers will want to get to know Mr. Waller.

Tony Waller, Associate Director, Public Interest Career Advisor
twaller@uga.edu | 706-542-5163 | Room 107

Anthony E. “Tony” Waller joined the University of Georgia School of Law in 2015 as the Career Development Office’s public interest and government employment specialist. He is responsible for advising students and alumni on public interest and governmental employment, as well as ensuring employers in those practices have access to Georgia Law students.

Prior to coming to Georgia Law, Waller was the chief executive officer and executive director of Children First, a non-profit organization in Athens, where he successfully developed a year-end campaign that raised over $10,000, developed and adopted a three-year strategic framework with his board and represented the organization by speaking to civic groups and social service organizations in the community. He also served as the assistant dean for career planning and professional development at the University of Illinois College of Law, where he built and maintained relationships with alumni, employers, local and university community members and other stakeholders to develop employment opportunities for students and alumni. He has also previously served as the associate director of career services at Georgia Law.

Waller is actively involved in the National Association of Law Placement, having served as a member of the Board of Directors, as vice chair of the Nominating Committee and the Conference Planning Committee, as well as a member of the Technology Resource Group and the By-Law Review Committee. He is currently chair of the JD Advisors Section. He is also active in the community, serving on the Colham Ferry Elementary School and Oconee County Middle School PTO boards, as well as the Oconee County Superintendent Parents Council.

Waller earned his bachelor’s degree cum laude in agricultural economics and his law degree from UGA.

“Working to help make the dreams of UGA Law students happen is my jam. After 13 years doing this, it remains a huge thrill seeing a student walk up with a smile to tell me they got that position.”

GETTING STARTED

Public interest law practice typically includes:

- Federal, state and local government agencies;
- Military;
- Prosecutor and public defender offices;
- Legal aid and civil legal services;
- Non-profits and non-governmental organizations (NGO's);
- Advocacy organizations.

Broader definitions may also include judicial clerkships and judicial internships.

It is important that students interested in public interest practice begin planning early and stay alert for opportunities. Employers may hire as budget opportunities allow, so interview options can surface at unpredictable times. Additionally, employers may want to be aware of committed students in advance of actual position needs, in order that they can hire quickly when jobs become available. Strategic and authentic outreach is key to both credential building and job success.

The Career Development Office has developed a full complement of public interest (and other career) resources in e-Learning Commons (eLC): <https://uga.view.usg.edu/>. There are groups for you to join, based on type of employer (for example, government, public defender, prosecutor), and based on practice focus (for example, environmental, employment). Joining groups will allow you to access resources, participate in discussions, and receive ongoing pertinent information.

The Professional Development web pages on Government and Public Interest have information to help students understand the landscape of public interest employers. The pages provide links to employer guides and professional organizations, in order that students can both explore the profession and connect with practitioners: <http://www.law.uga.edu/government-public-interest>

Public interest employers are likely to access hiring programs throughout the year, interacting with the Career Development Office in a variety of ways:

- Job announcements on Symplicity;
- On-campus interviews in both fall and spring;
- the Equal Justice Works Career Fair and Conference (October in Washington, D.C.);
- the Judicial Clerkship Job Fair (January in Athens, GA);
- the Georgia Public Sector Job Fair (February in Atlanta, GA);
- Off-campus interview programs year-round throughout the U.S.

Note that registration deadlines for interview programs can be six weeks or more prior to the interviews, so it is important to pay attention to e-mail notices. On-campus interviews are usually larger offices, or those closer to the University of Georgia. Off-campus interviews and the targeted public interest interview programs attract a wider array of public sector employers.

It is important to realize that at some of the targeted public sector interview programs, employers will participate in screened interviews or in walk-up “table talk” interviews. Both of these are viable hiring activities in the eyes of the employers. Students should incorporate the accessible table talk interviews into their public interest job search strategies, and attend targeted career training sessions to prepare for using table talk interviews to their best advantage.

The Career Development Office pays subscription fees for students to access a number of top resources for public interest jobs and career information, including:

- PSJD
- Government Honors & Internship Guide
- Public Policy Handbook
- Opportunities in Public Affairs
- Environmental Career Opportunities
- Human Rights Jobs Worldwide.

RESUME, COVER LETTER AND INTERVIEWING TIPS

The Career Development Office has excellent resume and cover letter advice, examples and templates available: <http://www.law.uga.edu/creating-job-search-documents>

Since public interest employers are evaluating students' interest in their work and clients as a main part of the hiring process, one of the easiest ways to fail in the job search process is to send a general application that does not demonstrate a commitment or connection. It is essential to customize every application letter and fine tune the resume. Some of the items often found on public interest resumes include:

- Sections highlighting Volunteer Activities
- Full descriptions of externships, clinical and pro bono experiences
- Details about non-legal jobs that serve relevant populations or demonstrate a commitment to public service career goals

Public interest and government employers are generally less concerned about the length of resumes and more concerned with gaining information that helps them assess motivation and commitment to their mission and work. Brevity is still appreciated, leaving the opportunity to expound in table talk or interviews, so one or two pages are preferred.

In addition to the specific workshops and resources on this, Tony Waller is a valuable advisor to help students tailor their job search documents to their individual public interest searches. Students are advised to review public sector job applications with Mr. Waller prior to submitting them.

Interviewing preparation is essential. Students should learn all they can about the organization, its funding and mission, and its clients. The mistake most often made in interviewing is assuming that public sector employers will have the same priorities as private firms.

While academic success is always valued, many public service employers look for other factors: dedication to client needs, demonstrated commitment, key coursework or experience relevant to the organization's goals. A student unable to discuss these may lose the job to one lower in the class who can.

Public interest employers may discuss substantive legal issues within interviews, as they relate to the organization's work; public defenders and prosecutors often give hypotheticals.

Additionally, since public service employers are not profit-driven, students need to become informed about starting salary differences between the public and private sector job markets: <http://www.nalp.org/salariescompensation>

Additionally, there are panels presented both by Career Development and by student groups discussing practice specialties and topics relevant to developing issues in public interest law. The best way to keep track of informational programming and activities is to check the law school's events calendar: <http://www.law.uga.edu/event-calendar>. All of these events are opportunities to learn about hiring patterns and to make networking connections.

PUBLIC INTEREST NETWORKING & INTERVIEW OPPORTUNITIES

Public interest employers are likely to be involved in any of the events coordinated by the Career Development Office, including job fairs, on-campus interviews, job postings, informational workshops, and networking events.

There are some annual events that specifically target public interest practitioners, seeking to assist students with both relationship building and job searching, including:

EQUAL JUSTICE WORKS

Equal Justice Works (<http://www.equaljusticeworks.org/>) hosts the largest annual conference and career fair for public interest employers and law students interested in public interest.

- 150+ government and public interest employers
- Pre-selected and open “table talk” interviews
- Targeted informational programming
- Travel grants available
- September 6, 2018: Information Session in Rm. F at the law school
- October 26-27, 2018: Career Fair and Conference in Arlington, VA

PUBLIC INTEREST CAREER EVENT AT BONDURANT, MIXSON, AND ELMORE

The Career Development Office annually partners with Bondurant, Mixson, & Elmore to host an on-site visit at their firm, featuring leaders in Georgia’s governmental and public interest legal community.

- The visit will include a panel and Q&A session on public interest and governmental practice, and will be followed by a reception to allow you to meet practitioners in these practice areas.
- The goal of this visit is to expose you to the culture of a professional legal environment, and also to give you the opportunity to meet, connect, and potentially form mentor-mentee relationships with attorneys practicing in public interest, legal services, governmental, and non-profit law.
- This event is set up to function primarily as an educational experience. This is an excellent opportunity to explore this type of practice, while exposing you to the legal environment, better preparing you to interview, intern, and providing possible mentor relationships with attorneys working in public interest and governmental law practice.
- Transportation is provided to Atlanta and back to the law school after the event.
- Watch the CDO newsletters and Symplicity for details and registration instructions.

PUBLIC INTEREST SPEED NETWORKING

Speed networking provides an opportunity for students interested in meeting public interest and government attorneys, to learn about their careers, get advice, and make valuable connections.

- Attorney participants represent a variety of public sector career options, including state, local and federal government, civil legal services, public defenders, prosecutors, and advocacy groups.
- In Atlanta. Transportation provided.
- Watch the CDO newsletters and Symplicity for details and registration instructions.

GEORGIA PUBLIC SECTOR CAREER FAIR

Sponsored by all of the law schools in Georgia, the annual Public Sector Career Fair provides an opportunity for public interest employers to interview law students for summer and post-graduate jobs.

- 70+ employers participate in pre-screened and open “table talk” interviews.
- Student registration opens in January.
- February 22, 2019: Interviews in Atlanta.
- Watch the CDO newsletters and Symplicity for details and registration instructions.

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

While almost all of the law school’s student organizations provide opportunities for community service and pro bono work, there are several whose missions directly relate to public interest law, either based upon their practice specialty focus, or because they focus on public interest law work, such as the Public Interest Law Council (PILC), Equal Justice Foundation, and Working in the Public Interest (WIPI). A full list of chartered law student organizations is available:

- <http://www.law.uga.edu/georgia-law-student-organizations>

Getting involved helps students to build both their credibility and connections.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT FOR A PUBLIC SECTOR CAREER

Pursuing a career in the public sector can take careful financial planning, since some summer jobs are unpaid, and since starting salaries may be lower than some private sector salaries (although benefits may be strong).

Students should fully educate themselves to plan well. Currently, through the College Cost Reduction Act, there is support for those pursuing non-profit careers, including forgiveness for balances remaining after ten years, and payments based upon income. Learn more by attending professional development workshops and at <http://www.equaljusticeworks.org/>

For summer and post-graduate opportunities, fellowships are available to support students in unpaid jobs. Information can be found:

- <http://www.psjd.org/>
- <http://www.equaljusticeworks.org/>
- <http://www.law.uga.edu/global-internship-program-2>
- <http://www.law.uga.edu/equal-justice-foundation>

Recognizing that some public interest employers wait to hire until after bar licensure, the law school's Bridge to Practice program provides stipends for students pursuing public interest jobs immediately after graduation. These funds enable students to forge connections and build credentials, in order to be ready for employment when they pass the bar.

The law school has a loan repayment assistance program that awards annual grants to selected alumni working in the public interest. For information on the Downs' Loan Repayment Assistance Program, see <http://www.law.uga.edu/downs-loan-repayment-program/>

Additionally, students can obtain academic credit for unpaid public interest work through the law school's experiential learning programs.

EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES

The University of Georgia School of Law has a rich history of experiential learning opportunities, supporting credentials valued by public interest employers for more than 50 years, and provides more than twice the number of clinical and practice-based experiences than any other law school in Georgia. These opportunities include:

- Appellate Litigation Clinic
- Atlanta Semester in Practice
- Business Law Clinic
- Capital Assistance Project
- Civil Externship
- Community Health Law Partnership Clinic

Through these programs, students can get academic credit and hands-on experience simultaneously. For full information about Experiential Learning Opportunities, read the information on the School of Law website: <http://www.law.uga.edu/academics/>.

DUAL DEGREE PROGRAMS

The law school has seven dual degree programs, and some of these create attractive credentials for public service careers:

- J.D./M.S.W. - Masters in Social Work;
- J.D./M.P.A. - Masters in Public Administration;
- J.D./M.P.H. – Masters in Public Health;
- J.D./M.H.P. - Masters in Historic Preservation.

In addition to dual degrees, law students also may enroll concurrently in courses in other departments at the University, and should consult the law school registrar for information about doing this.
