Please share specific comments below.	Professor Hashimoto is known for picking one student to be the plaintiff and another student to be the defendant and letting them argue back and forth. This is beneficial only to a point - after about 20 minutes or so the class seemed to devolve into students guessing at arguments in order to try to keep looking prepared. The class would have been more beneficial if the professor had done more lecturing instead of letting students make bad arguments for 30 minutes.
