1	Closed book exam--fair but the essay question was pretty out of left field.	Mar 5, 2012 11:32 AM
2	If you're at all interested in criminal law this class is a must. I enjoy Cook's laid back approach to teaching. I absorb the material much better when I'm not on edge about being called on.	Feb 23, 2012 2:50 PM
3	Prof. Cook's class is a really good class to take if you need to take evidence and if you want a class that won't be a big time commitment outside class. You know which day you'll get called on to "brief" your case, so it's not a lot of pressure to feel super prepared. Prof. Cook also doesn't hide the ball and does a really good job at laying out the material and then going back and showing you how it all fits together.	Feb 20, 2012 2:43 PM
4	Exam is MC and 1 essay question. Essay was worth about 45%. You must know the law... Closed book.	Feb 15, 2012 3:04 PM
5	Exam was crazy multiple choice. Think 78 questions and then a short essay. I don't know how I did ok in the class because I had no idea what then answers were on the test. But, Cook is awesome and it's a fun, helpful class.	Feb 12, 2012 9:50 PM
6	If you want a class where you don't really have to read since you know what day you will be called on- he goes in a snake formation up and down the rows, then this is the class for you. But if you really want to learn the material and not on your own right before the exam then take another teacher. Cook knows the material he just has a hard time conveying it and he will do a hypothetical that will last all class. The exam is closed book- but not too tough. If you know the material then you will be fine on the exam but nothing is allowed in the exam room so you need to memorize the federal rules.	Feb 12, 2012 5:53 PM
7	Exam is actually predominantly MC and True-False with only about 15% being an essay.	Feb 12, 2012 4:38 PM
8	Cook is the man! His class was by far the most enjoyable class I have had so far. You know when you will be called on and the material is not hard, especially if you get the supplement which is fantastic! Note that he may not look like he takes attendance, but he definitely does! I look forward to having Cook as a professor for something else in the future.	Feb 6, 2012 6:16 PM
9	Prof. Cook is so nice and even occasionally funny; he's also very chill, and you always know when you're going to get called on (he's also willing to guide you through complicated concepts). He is also extremely good at simplifying complex rules. But he often takes 15 minutes to explain one hypo and over-explains many things... I enjoyed the course materials, but class itself just wasn't intriguing or engaging at all for me. But if you want a really chill class with a really nice professor (even though it might be super boring), take Cook.	Feb 6, 2012 6:09 PM
10	This class is great, it's really low stress and Cook is very entertaining.	Feb 6, 2012 12:09 PM
11	Professor Cook is the best. His class is very laid back, but you will learn the material. Professor Cook uses stories from his experience as a prosecutor, and they are really helpful for illustrating the practical implications of the rules.	Feb 6, 2012 11:07 AM
12	he's a character, but going to class isn't totally necessary... "Evidence in a Flash"	Feb 6, 2012 11:00 AM cards are a must if you want to learn this material, irrespective of your effort/class attendance.

| 13 | Professor Cook moves up and down the rows so you always know when you're getting called on. Sometimes its kind of easy to drift off in class, and you don't always feel like your time is getting used wisely. I wish he had moved a little faster, because I might have been more motivated to pay attention. That said, I think I did get a lot out of this class. Exam is closed book - which seems scary but you end up knowing more than you think. | Feb 6, 2012 8:28 AM  |
| 14 | Very relaxed class...you know when you'll be called on and Cook doesn't expect too much. Multiple choice on the exam can be tricky, but as long as you know the federal rules fairly well, you'll well in the class.   | Feb 6, 2012 8:28 AM  |
| 15 | Exam was 30 true/false, 35 multiple choice, and a short essay. Overall, I really enjoyed this class.   | Feb 6, 2012 12:03 AM |
