1	One of my favorite classes in law school. The book is probably the most accessible law school book I've ever read, and Professor Miller's lectures fit perfectly with the material (he is a co-author). There's no socratic at all, the exam is long but fair, and Professor Miller does a great job in illustrating the intricacies of various forms of IP law.	Feb 26, 2012 7:00 PM
2	Professor Miller doesn't call on anyone, ever. The course content was extremely organized and he stayed on schedule. He routinely presented the material in an incredibly clear manner, which is why I was really surprised when I couldn't understand what he was asking on the exam. If you are someone who needs external pressure to meet deadlines you might want to think twice about taking this course. It became progressively more difficult to read for this class, since he doesn't call on anyone and presents the material in a pretty straightforward way.	Feb 12, 2012 10:50 PM
3	Straight lecture. Don't take this class unless you're interested in IP.	Feb 12, 2012 10:06 PM
4	Prof. Miller does not engage in the Socratic method. Entirely lecture based course, which can be good or bad depending on your ability to stay off facebook.	Feb 12, 2012 7:02 PM
5	He's definitely a patent guy, but he does a really good job with all the subjects. He never calls on anyone either.	Feb 12, 2012 4:36 PM
6	I wouldn't recommend this class to anyone	Feb 11, 2012 7:58 PM
7	Professor Miller does not call on people, so be sure to stay caught up on reading. While I sometimes found the class to be boring, Prof. Miller is very approachable.	Feb 8, 2012 2:43 PM
8	Awesome! Miller is easy to understand and entertaining. Uses powerpoint and never calls on anyone.	Feb 6, 2012 6:53 PM
9	Miller doesn't call on people at all. His exam was extremely difficult, though. The exam we took was way longer and more complicated than the old ones he posted for us.	Feb 6, 2012 4:08 PM
10	This was a low stress class. Miller doesn't call on students and he posts all of his powerpoints online. He also wrote the book, so you'll be able to study exactly what he wants you to know. That said - if you do take the class, don't fall victim to the temptation to NEVER read....because exam time will come and you'll have an entire textbook to catch up on!	Feb 6, 2012 3:34 PM
11	This was a great class. Miller lectures so you will never be called on, which can make it hard to motivate yourself to read. His exam was very straightforward and most people I talked to did really well in the class. I definitely recommend this class.	Feb 6, 2012 3:24 PM
12	Professor Miller is clearly an expert in the field and his course is very well organized. The powerpoints were hugely helpful in outlining the course and the book is well written.	Feb 6, 2012 2:02 PM
13	Did not call on students at all. Textbook was only available online (had to print on your own).	Feb 6, 2012 12:59 PM

14	Only one thing to point out: no socratic method, all lecture. Obviously, this can be awesome, BUT do not expect to be okay just using someone else's outline or a commercial supplement. He gets very particular about what he wants you to know, and the exam reflected that in a big way. Therefore, if you take this class with him, be prepared to listen (and/or record, like I did). This will be painful if you try and do this with absolutely no effort. Then again, he puts up model answers for his exam, which was an amazing study tool for me.	Feb 6, 2012 9:28 AM
15	He literally never called on anyone the entire time. After the first week, most of the class stopped reading cases completely.	Feb 6, 2012 12:19 AM
16	Doesn't call on anyone, lectures from PowerPoint, super nice guy. relaxed attendance policy	Feb 5, 2012 11:16 PM
