Things for 2Ls to think about….

1. Cannot take over 16 hours of clinical courses. This is important if you are thinking about the DC program, which is 13 hours.
2. If you are a joint degree student, make sure to verify the number of JD hours you must have. Also be aware that you have to have 65 classroom credit hours.
3. Requirements to graduate: 88 semester hours; Legal Profession, Con Law I, and a Practical Skills course. Please plan accordingly. If you wait until your last semester and the class fills, the reason “because I have to take it to graduate” does not get you an automatic seat in the class.
4. Writing Requirements!!

BAR EXAM INFORMATION

HOW TO LOCATE BAR EXAM INFORMATION:

The National Conference of Bar Examiners site:  http://www.ncbex.org/ provides links to each state’s official Bar Exam site. Also available, descriptions of:
- the Multistate Professional Responsibility Examination (MPRE),
- the Multistate Bar Examination (MBE),
- the Multistate Performance Test (MPT),
- the Multistate Essay Examination (MEE),
- and the Uniform Bar Examination (UBE)
along with easily navigable maps showing which jurisdictions utilize each as part of their bar examination process.

As you review bar admissions information:
1. Assume nothing - each state will have different deadlines, fees and procedures.
2. In some states, exam takers must pass character and fitness prior to registering for (and taking the bar exam).
3. In other states, exam takers sit for the exam before passing character and fitness.
4. Others may combine deadlines or overlap processes.
5. Deadlines vary from state to state, and some have discounted fees for early registration.

CHECK EARLY TO LEARN ABOUT REQUIREMENTS IN DIFFERENT JURISDICTIONS. They all have one thing in common: they never waive deadlines.

THE MULTISTATE PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY EXAMINATION (MPRE):

The Multistate Professional Responsibility Examination (MPRE) is required in Georgia and all but three U.S. jurisdictions. Information on test dates, deadlines and fees can be found at: http://www.ncbex.org/about-ncbe-exams/mpre/. Students may take the test prior to graduation, and should be prepared to sit for the MPRE following the completion of their professional responsibility course.

You will want to review your individual loan status to educate yourself about your options.

The School of Law operates the Downs’ Loan Repayment Assistance Program, an annual grant program, to help those in public service employment with their student loan debt. Full information about the Downs’ Loan Repayment Assistance Program and applications can be found here: http://www.law.uga.edu/downs-loan-repayment-program. WHAT IS THE PROSECUTORIAL CLINIC PROGRAM?

Historical Background:

In 1969, the State of Georgia awarded a federal grant to the University of Georgia School of Law for the purpose of establishing a “Law School Prosecutorial Clinic.” The purpose of the grant was to provide training to law students in the prosecution of criminal cases and to allow district attorneys to have law student interns to assist in the preparation and trial of criminal cases. The following year, the Georgia General Assembly enacted the “Law School Public Prosecutor Act of 1970” (O.C.G.A. §15-18-22), more commonly known today as the “Third Year Practice Act,” which allows third-year law students to appear in court and prosecute criminal cases under the supervision of a district attorney, solicitor-general, or a duly appointed assistant prosecutor.

Since 1969, the University of Georgia School of Law has continuously maintained the Prosecutorial Clinic Program for the purpose of educating and training its students in the art of criminal prosecution and to provide a valuable public service to the State of Georgia and its prosecutorial community.

Course Description:

The Prosecutorial Clinic Program, hereinafter the “Program,” is a three-semester clinical course that provides law students with the opportunity to work and earn academic credit under the supervision of public prosecutors located in offices throughout Northeast Georgia. The Program is coordinated by its Director, a full-time instructor with a background in criminal prosecution. Students participating in the Program take three (3) consecutive semesters beginning with the spring semester of their second year (JURI 5150 / 2 credits) and continuing through both semesters of their third year (JURI 5160 / 3-6 credits each). Students receive both graded and pass-fail credit. Enrollment is typically limited to 25 students per academic class. Eligibility is determined according to the Law School’s point allocation system.

Students participating in the Program in their second year attend a weekly seminar taught by the Director that focuses on basic criminal procedure and prosecutorial skills including: the law of arrests, the Miranda Rights, drafting charging documents, and conducting preliminary hearings. During their third year, students work from 9-18 hours a week in their assigned offices. Third-year students also attend a weekly seminar taught by the Director that focuses on more complex prosecution issues including: the exercise of prosecutorial discretion, plea-bargaining, the “Brady rule” and criminal discovery, search and seizure law, the death penalty, and prosecutorial ethics.

Third-year students are sworn in under the “Law School Public Prosecutor Act of 1970” and perform the duties of a public prosecutor under the supervision of district attorneys, solicitors-general, and their duly appointed assistants. Typical duties include: drafting accusations and indictments; conducting preliminary hearings, juvenile adjudication hearings, and probation revocations; researching and arguing motions to suppress; drafting appellate briefs; and trying cases before judges and juries.

WHO SHOULD ENROLL?

The Prosecutorial Clinic Program provides a unique opportunity for law students to apply their newly acquired classroom knowledge in a real-world clinical setting. Students contemplating a career in criminal prosecution should seriously consider participating in this course. On the other hand, any student who is merely seeking greater insight into the inner workings of our criminal justice system, trial practice, or law office dynamics should benefit from participation in the Program and is encouraged to enroll.

All second-year students in good standing are eligible to seek enrollment in the Program. Enrollment is typically limited to 25 second-year students (who, once accepted, automatically qualify to continue in the Program during their third year). Eligibility for these 25 slots is determined according to the Law School’s point allocation system.

In addition to successfully enrolling in compliance with the point allocation system, students will be required upon acceptance in the Program to sign a Letter of Commitment pledging their commitment to full participation in all three semesters of the Program, including its externship and classroom components.

CAUTION: Only those second-year students accepted and participating in the Program during the spring semester of their second year will be eligible to participate in the Program the following year.

IMPORTANT: Students may be fingerprinted and required to pass a background check before beginning their externships in the third year. Students not passing the background check WILL be dismissed from the Program.

About the Director: Alan A. Cook is a 1984 graduate of the University of Georgia School of Law. From 1990 to 2000, Mr. Cook served as the elected District Attorney for the Alcovy Judicial Circuit. He has over 13 years of experience as a prosecutor and has tried more than 100 criminal jury trials including 19 homicide cases. A graduate of the Prosecutorial Clinic Program himself, he has served as the Program’s director since August of 2001. He is the author of the CMBrief© and CMBrief© Appendix (a comprehensive trial brief with forms for the prosecution of child sexual abuse cases). Mr. Cook also teaches Trial Practice.
D.C. Semester in Practice Program: Spring 2015

Students earn 13 credits while in residence in Washington, D.C.: ten (10) credits are earned in an externship program in which students work 32 hours per week in select placements; and three (3) credits are earned from a non-clinical course taught by a professor from a D.C. law school. Ten (10) credit hours count against the Law School’s cap of 16 clinical credits.

Classes are held at the University of California Washington Center located near Dupont Circle at 1608 Rhode Island, Ave., NW, Washington, D.C., 20036.

Students pay regular tuition. Additional financial aid is available based on cost of living in Washington, D.C.

Placements

Placement opportunities are varied and include federal, state and local government agencies, non-profits, judicial chambers and Capitol Hill. A complete list of placements is available on the website at http://www.law.uga.edu/dc-semester-practice-program.

Courses

Non-Clinical Course:

The Spring 2015 course taught by Professor David Fontana (George Washington University Law School) is Comparative Constitution Making, is 3 credits and graded. Countries around the world are drafting or re-drafting their constitutions. This class considers what should be in those constitutions, and how countries might consider drafting those constitutions. Readings include constitutional text, cases and commentaries from the United States and from abroad.

D.C. Externship Clinic:

This is a ten-credit course, consisting of two parts: two (2) credits for the weekly two-hour seminar and eight (8) credits for the student’s work at the placement. Placements provide detailed feedback regarding students’ performance, which feedback is used in grading. Students submit written reflection of their work in the form of journals, weekly time sheets, written work product produced in the course of the placement and must present to the class. Students receive a grade for one-half of these credits and receive a pass-fail designation for the other half.

Application Process

Students must apply for a spot in the D.C. program. Applications are available on the website and due to Jessica Heywood (jheywood@uga.edu) on September 24. Applications include résumé, transcript (unofficial is fine) and a statement of interest.

Students accepted into the program submit application materials to individual placements. Placements have an opportunity to vet applicants by requiring additional materials or a phone interview. In some cases, students will be required to pass a security clearance.

If you have any questions, please don’t hesitate to contact Jessica Heywood (jheywood@uga.edu)
